Film's objectives – Overall

Objective of the Film Screening:

This film screening aims to provide a space for reflection, healing, and acknowledgment of the grief and trauma experienced during the Covid-19 pandemic. Many bereaved individuals and frontline healthcare workers were unable to properly process their loss due to the extreme circumstances, and as society moved forward, their pain often remained unaddressed.

By showcasing a professional observational documentary, the screening offers a structured yet compassionate environment for individuals to recognise and process their emotions. It serves as a valuable resource for healthcare staff, bereaved families, and the wider community, fostering emotional well-being and resilience.

Key Outcomes:

- Supporting NHS and social care staff in managing stress, anxiety, and grief, reducing burnout, and improving morale.
- Assisting bereaved individuals in processing their loss and alleviating unresolved emotions.
- Promoting communal healing by acknowledging and addressing the collective trauma of the pandemic.

This initiative requires only time and engagement rather than significant financial resources, making it a practical and impactful step toward recovery and emotional well-being.

Film's objectives – Hospital Chaplains

Spiritual and pastoral care became more vital than ever during the pandemic, yet many chaplains were unable to provide comfort in traditional ways. The film reflects on how chaplains adapted, the struggles they faced, and how spiritual care might evolve in future crises.
